A question about rain

Name: _____ Date: _____

Layla saw drops on the glass. It was raining! From her safe seat, she looked outside. The ground was dry. An adult was washing the outside of the window. The drops were real, but her first idea was wrong. She drew a drop and a question mark.

Talk and draw

What did Layla observe first? Which idea did she change? Draw a drop and write a question about it. No water test is needed.

A question about rain

Name: _____ Date: _____

Layla was reading beside Dad when she noticed small drops on the closed window. It had started raining, she said. Dad asked what she had seen exactly. Drops on the glass, she answered. From her seat, she looked at the visible part of the street. She could not see drops falling from the sky, and the ground was dry. A moment later, an adult passed the window while washing the outside of the glass. The water had come from washing this time. Dad did not tell Layla to stop making guesses. He asked how her idea had changed. She drew a drop in her notebook and wrote: I saw water. Under it she wrote: I thought rain, then found another cause. She liked having room for her first idea and for what she learned afterwards.

Talk and draw

What did Layla observe first? Which idea did she change? Draw a drop and write a question about it. No water test is needed.